If we see one alpaca from Fawna's paddock area pushed outside on a cold winter day, it's usually Fawna. Maybe that speaks to the density of her fleece. Fawna, full Peruvian and half-Accoyo, is a fabulous fawn female that would play an important role in any farm's foundation herd. Her fleece style is highly desirable; displaying the tight, "zipper" crimp throughout. Combined with her fineness, velvet-like handle, and eye-opening luster, Fawna had an impressive show career winning a Championship, Reserve, two 1st Places, and a 2nd place. Her lineage includes MFI Peruvian Donovan, Accoyo Augusto, and Accoyo Dracula. She is a consistent producer. Her offspring (Jersey Boy, Buster and Buttercup) all have outstanding fleece of similar quality--extremely fine and tightly crimped with wonderful luster.
